Notes

Finding an Angle...

- Stories in most yearbooks are the same, regardless of where you are.
  - Football in Arkansas vs. Florida...boy kicks football, QB throws touchdown pass...
- Must be truthful, but also appropriate

Finding an Angle...

Same leads, multiple schools:

- While other students did _____, (name) did the opposite.
- The purpose of _____ is _____.
- It's _____ season again.
- On (date), _____ traveled to _____.

Finding an Angle...

Accurate, but not appropriate:

- ❑ SEX. Let's admit it: it's on everyone's mind...
- ❑ He's rolling around the aisles, but it's not because of his sense of humor. Freshman Joey Jones has spina bifida...

Finding an Angle...

Capturing an angle...

- Who/what is the most interesting part of this story?
- Who will my readers want to know more about?
- Whose eyes should I tell this story through?
- How can I capture the spirit of the story.

Teams: Cliché to Creative Angles

- ❑ In a teenager's life, one thing is true: the need for money is ever-present. Some teens can get money by working in stores or by doing odd jobs, but perhaps the most popular way to earn money is by babysitting.

Babysitting at first glance seems an ideal job. You can sit and watch television and eat other people's food while you keep an eye on kids. However, babysitting does have its share of problems.

Teams: Phase III

A S S I G N M E N T

- Hampton will be up one team at a time.
- Hampton will explain:
  - What page(s) you've been assigned
  - Explain rubric for grading those pages
- You will:
  - Divide up tasks evenly (who is going to do what)
  - Set your own schedule (sports only)
  - Begin preliminary research (what angles can we take, what pictures should we get, etc.)
